

Petticoat White Zinfandel

California • USA

California's 'original Zin' (Zinfandel) is a dark, brooding red of immense power. These days it also appears as a pink and even a white wine. If you're a rosé fan susceptible to the charms of fruity New World wines, Petticoat is a sure-fire hit.

Much too easy to drink. Was an instant hit all around the table with a delicious flavour

Online Review for 2013

Petticoat is loved for its easy to drink, fruit rich style reminiscent of watermelon and strawberries. And it stands out even more because the grapes were left on the vine that little bit longer for a wonderful hint of sweetness. Zinfandel is California's most widely planted red grape, providing the full gamut of styles from everyday drinking to fine, long lived wines. The quicker the skins of the crushed grapes are separated from the juice, the lighter the colour. Petticoat is a hue the Americans often refer to as 'blush'. Skin contact was just long enough to allow in all the fruitiness of the grape but no drying tannins. Enjoy Petticoat chilled, on its own, with nibbles or something more substantial like grilled prawns with spicy salsa.

The Golden state's first flag was a bear with a star, painted on a petticoat. We've taken the concept a step further ...
